Chairperson	Carter, David	National Party, List	david.carter@national.org.nz	Was on the Primary Production Committee in 1995 considering the Bill that eventually became the Fisheries Act 1996. On July 31 1996 he made the following comments to the House, "The principal part of the Bill that I felt we had to get right was Part II. Purpose and Principles" - the very framework of the legislation. Had we not spent a considerable amount of time on that part of the Bill, so that we could be relatively confident we had got it right, i think the rest of the Bill would have been doomed to failure".

Member	Roy, Eric	National Party, Invercargill	eric.roy@national.org.nz	Eric was Chairman of the Primary Production Committee in 1995/96. The Fisheries Bill was considered by the Committee for 21 months prior to its intro in 1996. Eric was chairman for most of that time. On 31 July 1996 he made the following statement in the House, "Part III is one of the key areas of the Bill. I consider it to be one of the most significant areas. We are talking about sustainability and a process for managing sustainability, and that is a key issue".
